arbitrary consumers (19%) Stock. If the U.S. economy improves throughout 2021, it can be said that information technology, communications services and arbitrary sectors of consumers stand to achieve the most in the coming months. Benzinga does not provide investment advice. All rights are preserved. An unprecedented epidemic has not prevented the U.S. stock market from ending 2020 on a high note. The S&P 500 ended a year of volatility at an all-time high, up 16.3 percent. Meanwhile, some stocks in the medical sector have made attractive returns for investors. But does that list include Gilead Sciences and Biogen.Does Wall Street expect these stocks to recover this year? We used TipRanks' stock companion tool to find out if analysts saw the potential for price increases in Gilead and Biogen and chose stocks that offered better investment opportunities. Gilead Sciences (GILD)Gilead Sciences grabbed headlines last year when its antiviral drug Remdesivir (sold under the brand name Veklury) was granted emergency use by the U.S. FDA (Food and Drug Administration) in May for the treatment of COVID-19. In October 2020, remdesivir became the first FDA-approved treatment in the United States for COVID-19 patients. The company produced better-than-expected results in the third quarter largely due to remdesivir, generating $873 million in revenue and driving overall 3Q revenue up more than 17% to $6.6 billion. Gilead's 3Q adjusted EPS rose 29 percent from the previous year to $2.11. (See GILD stock analysis on TipRanks) However, the company cut its 2020 revenue forecast to about $23 billion- $23.5 billion, from its previous outlook of $23 billion-$25 billion, and warned that Remdesivir's revenue was significant fluctuations and uncertainty. In addition, the country's hepatitis C virus (HCV) business continues to be under pressure in the context of an epidemic. Gilead has a strong HIV portfolio, including its lead drug, Biktarvy. Revenue from HIV products increased 8% to $4.5 billion in 3Q and accounted for 70% of the company's total product sales. That said, there are concerns about the sale of the HIV drug Truvada due to the loss of monopoly. Meanwhile, the company is strengthening its business through strategic acquisitions in key growth areas such as cancer. Last year, Gilead acquired Immunomedics for $21 billion. The acquisition added Trodelvy, an FDA-approved three-negative metastatic breast cancer treatment, to Gilead's portfolio. The company also acquired clinical immunotherapy company Forty Seven for $4.9 billion by 2020. Most recently, Gilead announced an agreement to acquire German biotechnology MYR GmbH, focusing on the development of treatments for chronic hepatitis delta virus treatment. Investors were disappointed when Gilead announced in December that it would not pursue FDA approval for filgotinib as a treatment for rheumatoid arthritis in the United States, following a meeting with regulators. The company signed a new agreement with the Galapagos partner, under which the following will be solely responsible in Europe for filgotinib, where 200 mg and 100 mg doses are approved for the treatment of medium to severe rheumatoid arthritis, and in all future appointments. Reacting to the development, Oppenheimer analyst Hartaj Singh lowered his price target to $100 from $105. However, analysts reiterated a Buy rating on Gilead as he continued to believe in his disscion (1) of a reliable remdesivir/other drug business against SARS-CoV flares, (2) a base business (HIV/cancer/HCV) develops single low digits over the next few years, (3) operational leverage provides greater income growth, and (4) a 3-4% dividend. Currently, the rest of the Road is cautiously optimistic, with a consensus analysis of moderate purchases based on 10 Buys, 12 Holds and 1 Sale. The median price target of $74 shows a potential 27% increase over current levels. The stock is down 10.4% in 2020 Biogen (BIIB)2020 is a difficult year for Biogen, which specializes in treating neurological disorders. The company faced a setback in November when the FDA's Central and Peripheral Systems Drug Advisory Committee voted against the effectiveness of aducanumab, an antibody investigated for the treatment of Alzheimer's disease. The news led to a major sell-off in Biogen shares as investors saw aducanumab as a potential blockbuster drug for the company. The Advisory Committee's recommendations are non-binding for review by the FDA and the company discloses that the FDA will continue the review process, with a decision on Aducunumab's approval to be made by July 7 3, 2021. (See BIIB stock analysis on TipRanks) Adding to investors' worries, Biogen loses patent with Mylan in June 2020 for its best-selling multiple sclerosis drug, Tecfidera, showed it to compete for the generic version of Mylan. Tecfidera's revenue fell 15 percent in the third quarter to $953 million, reflecting the impact of many joint participants in the United States. Moreover, Biogen's spinal muscular atrophy drug, Spinraza, is feeling the impact from Evrysdi Roche, with sales of the drug down 10% to $495 million in 3Q. Overall, the company's third-quarter revenue fell 6.2 percent to $3.4 billion and adjusted EPS fell 3.6 percent to $8.84. Biogen lowered its all-year revenue outlook to $13.2 billion - $13.4 billion from $13.8 billion to $14.2 billion, assumptions of significant erosion of TECFIDERA in 4Q. Biogen has been involved in strategic collaboration to access drugs with promising potential. It recently announced a $1.5 billion (plus potential milestone payments) deal with Sage Therapeutics to co-develop and sell zuranolone (SAGE-217) for major depressive disorder (MDD), postpartal depression (PPD) and other psychiatric disorders and SAGE-324 for essential concussions and other neurological disorders. After the SAGE deal, Oppenheimer analyst Jay Olson reiterated the Buy rating on Biogen with a $300 price target. Olson explained, Zuranolone is a potential first-class oral therapy for MDD and PPD treatment currently in many Ph3 studies. With our view that zuranolone is an active drug and significantly marketed opportunities in MDD/PPD, we believe the agreement provides BIIB with some much-needed revenue growth in the medium term and better position than BIIB regardless of aducanumab results. Meanwhile, Street sided with Biogen with hold analyst consensus based on 11 Buys, 13 Holds and 5 Sells. The median price target stands at $293.74, implying an upside could be 20% in the coming months. Biogen shares fell 17.5% last year. ConclusionAfter a volatility-filled 2020, Street's psychology will be better for Gilead than Biogen's, supported by factors such as the company's HIV portfolio and prospects for cancer. In addition, unlike Biogen, Gilead pays dividends and has a dividend income of 4.67%.
